POLIO PERSONNEL SUPPORT LASSA FEVER RESPONSE IN NIGERIA

In Nigeria, experts from the frontline of polio eradication are helping to end other disease outbreaks.

The polio infrastructure

When outbreaks of other diseases happen, the knowledge and experience of polio personnel like can make a significant difference to outbreak response. For example, polio workers were essential to containing the Ebola virus outbreak in 2014. For the Lassa fever response, 271 polio workers are involved in active case search, 235 in contact tracing, and 320 in community sensitization activities across the 18 at-risk states.

"The polio infrastructure was originally designed towards achieving the polio eradication goals," said Dr Wondimagegnehu Alemu, WHO Country Representative to Nigeria. "Now polio infrastructure has expanded its support to broader disease surveillance strengthening, outbreak response and basic health care services including immunization."

Other activities carried out by polio workers include data collation and analysis, and case reporting.

"The polio teams on ground in the states were crucial for mounting the initial response to the Lassa fever outbreak, and have continued to be WHO's frontline technical support to the NCDC, States Ministry of Health and local government area teams," Dr Emmanuel Musa, WHO Incident Manager for Lassa fever Management Team in Nigeria observed.

A legacy for posterity

Investments by donors and partners have gone far beyond polio eradication. Reflecting the positive impact that polio infrastructure and knowledge has had on other health priorities such as Lassa fever, WHO and other partners are currently supporting the development of a national transition plan. This will ensure that the investments that have brought the world to the brink of eradication are made available to support other national public health efforts, long after polio has been defeated.

"We must carefully consider how we transition many of the polio workers and the polio infrastructure to help with managing other health needs," Dr Alemu said. "Future funding and partnerships will be a key part of this work."

For now, experienced polio personnel continue their work to end the Lassa fever outbreak. Thanks to them, and the support of governments, partners and donors, we are ending polio, and are also helping to strengthen other health interventions.

What Paul Harris Said

Saturday, 28 April 2018

Hi Herbert Budd Jr

This Rotarian Age, page 253, 1935

"Those who have Rotary's interests at heart, trust that we may always continue to view it and its children, the other so-called service clubs, as contributions merely to social progress within our chosen sphere; that we may view ourselves and our work in proper perspective; that we may never become complacent; that we may stand ready to face adversity or prosperity, war or peace; that our thoughts may never become crystallized; that we may ever continue to grow. This is a changing world; we must be prepared to change with it. The story of Rotary will have to be written again and again."
